

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a pharmaceutical preparation containing basic physiologically active substance and enteric polymer, which has improvements in releasability of the contained physiologically active substance in intestinal canal. The basic medicine-containing preparation of the present invention comprises one or more electrolytes by which the action of the enteric polymer to suppress release of the basic physiologically active substance is improved.